ABSTRACT

This annual report, consisting of 16 district summaries, demonstrates how federal Library Services and Construction Act (LSCA) funds have supported a wide range of 1994 projects to improve services in Michigan libraries. Most often these projects involved getting connected to the Internet, making the library accessible to the handicapped, enlarging special outreach services, or implementing other new technologies like wide area networking, CD-ROM applications, or electronic document delivery aids. Each district summary is divided into Title I, Title II, and Title III projects. It lists individual libraries who received monies, along with amounts, and it gives a brief annotation as to the type of project pursued. Also provided are a roster of Michigan's Congressional delegation and a map of Congressional districts. Statewide summaries outline: Title I grants to regional and subregional libraries serving the blind and physically handicapped; Title I grants to major urban resource (public) libraries in cities of 100,000 or more; Title I discretionary grant money totals separated by type of project or desired improvement; all Title II monies used specifically for construction and renovation projects; and Title III monies given to "regions of cooperation," or voluntary library networks. April 1995

Dear Members of Congress:

I am pleased to provide you with the Library of Michigan's annual report on the important role of federal Library Services and Construction Act (LSCA) funds in improving Michigan library services. LSCA... Information Partners for the 21st Century presents district-by-district summaries of our state's 1994 LSCA grant program, and demonstrates how federal funds have supported a wide range of projects.

The 1994 LSCA grant program provided funds to connect libraries to the Internet as the first step in developing libraries as electronic community information centers. Funding for libraries to provide a gateway to the national information superhighway is critical to ensuring a public voice in the new electronic democracy. LSCA has helped many libraries to begin the important transition to providing the electronic services of the future.

LSCA funds were also used for programs dedicated to ensuring that library services are accessible to all individuals, regardless of special needs, including those who have difficulty in getting to a library; those needing special materials or services; and those benefiting from special outreach services, including children living below the poverty level.

LSCA support has been a key focus in the implementation of a wide range of new technology in Michigan libraries. Projects included connectivity to the Internet, wide area networking, CD-ROM applications, and document delivery technology such as the ARIEL workstation. LSCA projects have provided models of service that benefit the entire library community. Successful LSCA projects have allowed libraries to assume leadership roles within their communities, and to forge new partnerships. These collaborations have a lasting impact on the advancement of library service, resulting in an improved quality of life for Michigan residents.

I appreciate your ongoing support of quality library service in Michigan. Please join the Library of Michigan, librarians, and trustees in our continued efforts to strengthen our libraries—with the shared goal of providing information access to all citizens.

Sincerely,

Jeffrey P. Johnson

Michigan's LSCA program seeks to assist libraries in developing service paradigms that incorporate new technologies and models of service, while continuing to meet the service needs of its traditional library users, including special populations. The 1995 Library of Michigan LSCA program identifies three major goals that are designed to extend and improve library services by:

- Establishing libraries as electronic community information centers;
- Enhancing equality of access and services to special populations or special collections;
- Supporting research and demonstration projects designed to assess the applicability of new technologies to library services.

Toward achievement of these goals, the Library of Michigan has used $6.5 million of LSCA dollars for technology projects over the last three year. $1.2 million has been used to provide Internet access, including the establishment of regional Internet Training Centers, located throughout Michigan.
